I'm Dr. Nicholas D'Alonzo. Duncraig is my lifelong home. I went to local schools, I've walked its streets, played in its parks, and marvelled at its birdlife. As devastating fires swept the east coast, I was angry and frustrated about why someone wasn't doing anything. I then realised that I was someone and I could do something

I excelled at UWA, earning a PhD in Nanotech. I am a scientist, I love data, and finding solutions to complex problems. I am not the typical image of a climate activist. I value evidence-based solutions to climate change.

Our current climate plan falls short of matching our citizens' enthusiasm for rooftop solar. I advocate for a comprehensive decarbonisation strategy that matches the targets set by our neighbour to the south. We also need to rethink our urban planning. Let's create an environment that encourages walking, biking, and public transport usage. We can better shape our community to free it from the tyranny of the car.
